Comments:

Fair job. I think you'll be able to pull together something for the client that works, but your team could do much more if it were united.

You selected good stories, but not enough of them got done. It was critical to have something working on the server by the end of this sprint.

What's done is done pretty well, especially the backend, but there's enough not done that it hurts overall quality.

No evidence of testing done this sprint was included.

Your retrospective covers the necessary points, but it seems to focus on what about the project is working. That's not the purpose of the retrospective. Its purpose is to focus on how the team is working and what processes you have in place that could be better. From what I can tell (and what the retrospective suggests), your team isn't working. Instead, you have a collection of individuals separately working on the project.
